A message from our leaders

Michael Garron Hospital is the heart of East Toronto. We're there for our community, young and old, to provide high-quality healthcare, making sure everyone can thrive.

Creating health by building community is what we do at Michael Garron Hospital. We're proud of our strong relationships with other organizations in East Toronto—spanning healthcare, social services, settlement services and others, and often dating back decades. These relationships allow us to deliver innovative programs to ensure everyone in our community can be as healthy as possible. We recognize that health is affected by many factors that we can't always treat in the hospital—circumstances like poverty, isolation, newcomer status, and other barriers.

Our relationships are also placing us at the forefront of the new Ontario Health Teams—part of the biggest healthcare reforms in Ontario in half a century. While other hospitals are currently building new partnerships, we're entering the future of healthcare from a position of strength.

Together with our donors and other supporters, we're transforming the way we bring health to our community through the redevelopment of our aging hospital. Work is well underway on the cornerstone of our project—the Ken and Marilyn Thomson Patient Care Centre, scheduled to open in 2022—and the revitalization of our hospital campus. We are also in the midst of the Heart of the East campaign, our $100-million fundraising effort in support of the $500-million redevelopment project.

The Heart of the East campaign and our hospital's redevelopment will completely transform healthcare for Toronto's east end. That has a ripple effect that will result in a stronger, more prosperous community: because when people are healthy, everyone around them benefits.

In the pages that follow, you'll read about how we're bringing high-quality healthcare close to home for nearly a half million people in Toronto's east end. You'll learn about how we provide exceptional emergency care; how we're revitalizing the hospital's technology with cutting-edge equipment purchased through the generosity of donors like you; and how we're building partnerships that respond directly to the most pressing health issues affecting our community—like eliminating the barriers to mental health faced by our young people.

When you give to Michael Garron Hospital, you're making a gift not just to a hospital, but to everyone in East Toronto. Your generosity ensures we can provide excellent care to our vibrant, diverse community—no matter which neighbourhood you live in. Because what you give to the east stays in the east. Thank you for your support.

1 STRATEGIC DIRECTION

Be excellent.

We provide excellent healthcare close to home for our East Toronto community. Being excellent means making compassionate decisions that are values- and evidence-based as well as patient-centered.

BY THE NUMBERS

Michael Garron Hospital has earned 24 leading practices since 2012 from Accreditation Canada, demonstrating its commitment to innovative practices in patient care and improving delivery of healthcare services.

Last year, 55 new community-based research studies were approved by the Michael Garron Hospital Research Ethics Board.

92 per cent of patients participating in the Patient-Oriented Discharge Summary (PODS) pilot project in the inpatient surgery unit reported they felt confident managing their care at home.

Putting our heart into emergency care for our community

BETTER CARE, FASTER, THANKS TO THE GARRON FAMILY

Our emergency physicians order close to 10,000 CT scans each year. Until now, porters have had to move emergency department patients who require these scans to our busy Margaret Chambers Diagnostic Imaging Department and then back to the emergency department for care. Now, thanks to the generosity of Berna and Myron Garron, medical staff at Michael Garron Hospital are saving valuable time in assessing and treating critically ill or injured patients through diagnostic imaging when and where they need it most—right in the emergency department. Last year, a new CT scanner was installed in the emergency department to provide patients with a more accurate diagnosis and a quicker visit.

Through a new navigator program, Michael Garron Hospital is reducing wait times and bringing a more human experience to the Stavro Emergency Department.

An emergency hospital visit is usually associated with one thing: a long wait. But at Michael Garron Hospital, a new initiative is making sure patients and their families get in and out as quickly as possible—and in comfort—by placing navigators in the Stavro Emergency Department.

The Stavro Emergency Department is one of the busiest single-site locations in Ontario, with a new patient arriving every six minutes. Each year, one in six East Toronto residents visits the emergency department to receive urgent care.

Some of the newest members of the emergency department team have no healthcare background—by design.

“When we looked for patient navigators, we made a point of hiring people with customer service skills,” explains Dr. Kyle Vojdani, Interim Chief, Emergency Department and Medical Director, Emergency Services. “Our medical team is pre-occupied with providing quality patient care, while a non-clinician can just focus on a patient’s immediate, non-medical needs.”

Navigators create a supportive environment to help make what is often a stressful experience more comfortable—while making sure patients can get in and out of the emergency department as quickly as possible. The program began as a pilot project in 2017, and proved so valuable that it was made permanent last year. Navigators focus on patient flow: assigning and placing patients in rooms, ensuring tests are completed, following up on test results, flagging doctors when results are in, coordinating the paging of consults and meeting many other patient needs.

According to Dawn Lee, one of Michael Garron Hospital’s five emergency department navigators, chief among those needs is communication. “Patients really appreciate knowing, for example, how long they can expect to wait, or that their test results are back from the lab,” she says. Equipped with her bright green “Ask Me” shirt and an approachable manner, she is a friendly and knowledgeable point person for patients.

“I love working with people and have found a special kind of teamwork here at the hospital,” says Dawn. “It’s so important to know the broader team—housekeepers, residents, consult staff and others. Everyone plays a role and needs to be in the loop to keep patients from falling through the cracks.”

And they help make patients feel more cared for, too. “We also offer little things like a blanket to provide comfort and make people feel tended to, and they are very grateful,” says Dawn.

Green Zone Waiting Room

During our busiest times, we may ask that visitors accompanying patients wait in the main waiting room near the emergency entrance. Your cooperation is appreciated.

WHAT’S NEXT:

A mental health emergency is a healthcare emergency. But often, the chaos of an emergency department isn’t the best place for someone in crisis to be. To provide the best mental health care possible when it’s needed most, Michael Garron Hospital is constructing a quiet, private space for mental health patients and people in crisis in the Stavro Emergency Department. The six-bed space—located away from the noise and activity of the emergency department—will be staffed by specially trained professionals and is scheduled to open in early 2020.

Introducing patient navigators has brought a new level of communication to the emergency department. Patients, staff and physicians are asked for feedback, which is then used to shape the role. And the dialogue goes both ways: patient input recently inspired the department to create new and clearer discharge instructions to help patients feel more confident when they return home.

“We’re very proud of this program,” says Dr. Vojdani. “Our staff and patients both love it. Navigators really help our clinical staff focus on patient care.”

A new hip— and a new lease on life

STATE-OF-THE-ART EQUIPMENT FOR A 21ST CENTURY FACILITY

It might seem like it's just machinery—but it's often what is between our patients and a healthier life. Thanks to our donors—in particular, Berna and Myron Garron—innovative medical equipment is providing our staff with the tools to help patients achieve better outcomes. Over the past year, we saw the addition of:

- a fluoroscopy unit and TIMS system with a radiation dose more than 60 percent less than our old machine
- an MRI that will mean improved patient comfort, shorter wait times and more precise diagnosis
- a CT scanner that scans more quickly, and provides sharper, more accurate images
- a portable ultrasound machine that will help us improve wait times and provide a wider range of procedures

“Over and above the improved patient care we can now provide with this new technology, our medical staff feels an immense sense of pride. This is our hospital too.”

With donor support, a transformation is taking place for East Toronto residents who need hip replacement surgery, giving them their lives back sooner.

Myles Gordon has been busy these days tending to his 3/4-acre garden. It's a lifelong hobby in which the 76-year old finds daily joy.

It's also an activity he thought had been causing his persistent back pain. But after a visit to his family doctor, he discovered it was actually hip pain—and his hip needed to be replaced.

“I had to do something about it because it was affecting my day-to-day activities,” Myles says. “I enjoy gardening, and I just couldn't do much of that anymore without pain.”

By coincidence, his doctor's office was also where he learned about the specialized anterior approach to hip replacement that surgeons at Michael Garron Hospital now offer, thanks to a revolutionary surgical table, funded in large part by the James H. Cummings Foundation.

“I was sitting in my doctor's office talking about what I thought was my back pain, when a fax came through describing the new type of hip replacement that Dr. Dmitry Tsvetkov was doing at Michael Garron Hospital,” remembers Myles. “Within a month, I was booked for the surgery.”

Hip replacement surgery is typically an invasive procedure with a long recovery time.

That's because hip replacement has traditionally been performed with the patient sideways, requiring the physician to make incisions into the large muscles of the pelvis or femur to access the hip joint. This approach resulted in more pain and a longer recovery.

The Hana® table is a specially designed operating table that enables the surgeon to position a patient facing upward. Though the surgery is the same, the table allows surgeons to use a direct anterior approach—replacing the hip through a single incision without detaching the muscle from the pelvis or femur.

“This minimally invasive technique allows us to work between these large muscles rather than going through them,” explains Dr. Tsvetkov, “so patients experience much less pain and recover more quickly.”

Patients can usually be discharged within one or two days, and recovery is reduced from six weeks down to just one or two—an appealing prospect for people who just want to get back to their regular activities.

Within hours of his surgery, Myles was up and walking and was discharged the next day to recover at home.

“I'd like to say I expected to have the health I had at age 25, but realistically I was just hoping that I would have no back pain after gardening season ended,” he says. “After a month of recovery, I was back in the gym every day doing light workouts, and I've gotten back to gardening.”

“This type of surgery is quickly becoming a standard of care,” explains Dr. Tsvetkov. “Having the equipment to do this procedure here at Michael Garron Hospital is very important, and without donor support we would not have been able to do this. We're very grateful.”

These days, Myles is grateful too.

“I'm feeling good and almost pain free—and my garden looks even better than me!”

WHAT'S NEXT:

“We're continually working to elevate the experience we deliver to our patients and community. This year, we are starting same-day hip replacement surgeries, so that community members like Myles can return home even faster, and introducing a new form of digital secure messaging between clinicians, to better manage treatment and care for our patients while they are in hospital and transition home.”

3 STRATEGIC DIRECTION

Build Community.

Our hospital was built 90 years ago through the generosity and commitment of our East Toronto community. Throughout our history, we've benefited from our engaged community—and in turn, maintained our commitment to create a healthier, stronger east end.

BY THE NUMBERS

Last year, Michael Garron Hospital launched 11 pilot initiatives with community partners to target pressing health issues in our community using $1.5-million in funding from the provincial government to support the surge in patient volumes during the busy winter flu season.

767 fellows, residents and students launched their careers at Michael Garron Hospital last year.

More than just a hangout for east-end youth

RBC FUNDS MENTAL HEALTH NAVIGATOR SERVICE

Navigating the mental health system is challenging for young people. Older teens and emerging adults are particularly vulnerable with respect to mental health, and young adults transitioning from adolescent to adult mental health care often encounter a huge gap in the provision of services.

In what may be a first for a Canadian community hospital, RBC has donated over $700,000 to develop a Youth and Young Adult Mental Health Navigator Service at Michael Garron Hospital. The gift will fund two full-time navigators and one clinician who will act as a navigator and project co-ordinator.

Working closely with the community, navigators will develop an understanding of the lives and experiences of the youth and young adults they serve. This is especially important, given that the hospital's catchment includes large immigrant populations facing socioeconomic and health inequity.

Through their support and case management, our navigators will help vulnerable young people and their families as they make their way through a mental health system that is complex and often poorly coordinated.

When you're struggling with your mental health during one of life's biggest transitions, having the right support is critical—like services now being provided to east-end youth through a new partnership.

The Youth Wellness Centre at WoodGreen Community Services has its playful side, with its ping pong table, video games and bean bag chairs. But this is more than just a hangout. Youth often struggle to access the mental healthcare they need, in part due to stigma. Now, thanks to a partnership between Michael Garron Hospital, East Metro Youth Services and WoodGreen Community Services, WoodGreen's young clients can access mental health support along with employment, financial literacy and programs for immigrant, LGBTQ and Black youth.

"We're really strong partners with Michael Garron Hospital," says Ashnoor Rahim, WoodGreen's Vice President, Community Care. "It's a tremendous hospital focused on providing care for their community, and we have the same agenda. We see over 800 youth a year. We thought, wouldn't it be great if we could build in more wellness help, offer mental health support and reduce the intimidation of seeing a psychiatrist?"

Toronto Central LHIN funded the renovation of WoodGreen's space, and the Centre for Addiction and Mental Health advised on the concept.

"There are great benefits to situating our mental health service in this Centre," says Dr. Krista Lemke, Medical Director,

Child and Adolescent Mental Health Services, Michael Garron Hospital. "It reduces some of the barriers for youth already coming to WoodGreen and provides more room and services for kids coming to our mental health walk-in. Youth can access mental health counselling from East Metro therapists and be offered psychiatric consultation, if they need it, right in the same location."

The approach has been client focused from the start, with youth advisors giving valuable input. Christine Nhan, a WoodGreen co-op student, jumped at the opportunity to shape the space.

"We talked about the barriers youth might experience," she said. To support young people concerned about stigma, they recommended separate access to counselling rooms. They chose a palette of blue and yellow, after a newcomer advisor steered them away from red, and its association with trauma. They suggested programming to promote diversity and inclusivity.

The Centre's overarching goal is to build trusting relationships with young people so that they will feel comfortable accessing any of the services. In its first weeks, youth were welcomed to homework help, job fairs, yoga, LGBTQ workshops, "Mo' Money, Mo' Problems" financial guidance and mental health counselling and drop-in sessions.

From idea to grand opening took less than six months. "We were able to harness long-standing links with our community very quickly," says Dr. Lemke. "To have this Centre emerge as something that's really helping youth is incredibly rewarding."

Christine Nhan
Youth Advisor, WoodGreen Community Services

WHAT'S NEXT:

Our relationships allow us to deliver innovative programs to ensure our community can be as healthy as possible. Our vision is to create a system without referrals and discharges. We will wrap services and care around patients whether they are in hospital or at home. We will achieve this vision through a legacy of trust in East Toronto, with a multi-decade track record of delivering "made in East Toronto" solutions together with our partners.

This isn't just a hospital. It's the heart of the east.

Architectural rendering of our new hospital campus, 2024

With the support of donors, the $100-million Heart of the East campaign is building a new hospital tailored to the needs of our diverse, vibrant community and solving the most pressing health issues affecting East Toronto. The impact: a stronger, healthier east end.

Highlights of our redevelopment will include:

- Creation of an outdoor community space along Coxwell Avenue with gardens, children's play areas and gathering spaces
- 80 per cent single-patient rooms in the Ken and Marilyn Thomson Patient Care Centre, meaning better infection control and more room for family
- Co-location of outpatient clinics, making navigating appointments easier
- New adult and child/adolescent inpatient mental health spaces, including a secure outdoor terrace for family visits, recreation and programming

OUR COMMUNITY

East Toronto is one of the most vibrant, diverse communities in Canada. And when you give to the Heart of the East, you're making the gift of better health to everyone in your community.

No matter which East Toronto neighbourhood you live in, you can count on Michael Garron Hospital to provide you and your family with the very best healthcare.

Building the heart of the east

It's been just over a year since we broke ground on the Ken and Marilyn Thomson Patient Care Centre and launched the Heart of the East campaign, and we've made a lot of progress so far. Here are a few of the milestones we've celebrated since April 2018.

Groundbreaking and campaign launch

On April 25, 2018 we broke ground on the Ken and Marilyn Thomson Patient Care Centre and officially launched the $100-million Heart of the East campaign.

The celebration became even more exciting with the announcement of a $12.5-million gift from Peter and Diana Thomson.

Parking lot relocation

Our public parking lot was relocated to a lot on Sammon Avenue west of Coxwell Avenue to prepare for shoring and excavation.

When the Ken and Marilyn Thomson Patient Care Centre opens, there will be four levels of underground parking for patients and visitors—making visits to the hospital easier.

Electrical substation removal and switchgear replacement

The electrical substation, which provides emergency power to wings A-F, was relocated in preparation for the demolition of E-Wing. Approximately 90 electrical shutdowns were required to complete the work.

New high voltage switchgear towers were installed off of Knight Street. The new equipment will power both the existing building and future construction.

Installation of new oxygen concentrator technology

The oxygen tank farm off of Sammon Avenue was removed and new oxygen concentrators were installed, allowing the hospital to generate its own oxygen supply on demand.

Michael Garron Hospital is the first acute care hospital of its size in North America to use oxygen concentrator technology.

F-wing podium, E-wing, and basement tunnel demolition

The F-wing podium had to be carefully separated from the adjacent building before it could be demolished as to not disrupt ongoing hospital operations.

E-wing—formerly home to the cafeteria and auditorium—and the E-basement tunnel were demolished to make way for the new facility construction.

Caisson drilling

Prior to excavation, EllisDon had to create a water-tight concrete wall around the perimeter of the construction site. A method called caisson drilling was used to create the underground retaining wall—or “bathtub”—which can withhold the earth's pressure beyond it and allow excavation to take place.

In total, 533 holes were drilled 24 metres below the earth's surface to form the concrete barrier.

Excavation

Site excavation for the four-storey underground parking lot is currently underway and is estimated to be complete in summer 2019.

6,000 trucks will be required to remove all excavated soil. The soil is being re-used to fill a former gravel quarry in a township northeast of Toronto.

83% of the Heart of the East campaign goal

As at March 31, 2019, we reached a milestone for our Heart of the East campaign with an incredible $83 million raised towards our $100-million goal. We still have $17 million to go—and we're going to need the support of our entire community to successfully fund our transformation.

A year of creating health & building community

In 2018-2019, we made great strides towards achieving our vision to Create Health. Build Community. Here are some of the milestones we're proud of.

Jun Excellence in Diversity and Inclusion Award

On June 3, the Canadian College of Health Leaders honoured Michael Garron Hospital as the recipient of the 2018 Excellence in Diversity and Inclusion Award. The award honours a forward-thinking Canadian healthcare organization that has demonstrated leadership in creating and promoting diversity and inclusion to improve the environment of its employees, patients and community.

Sep New hospital and foundation websites

On September 5, the new Michael Garron Hospital and Michael Garron Hospital Foundation websites went live. The new sites give the hospital and foundation a fresh new look. They also give the public better information and an improved experience, whether they need to locate information related to a hospital visit, learn more about the impact a donation makes, or make a gift online.

Michael Garron Hospital Cup: Kick the Stigma

On September 21, 297 soccer players representing 32 teams descended on Monarch Park Stadium for the inaugural Michael Garron Hospital Cup: Kick the Stigma, presented by Toronto Honda and Toronto Kia. It was a true community event bringing together people from across East Toronto. Thanks to generous sponsors, participants, and donors, the event raised $200,000 towards the mental health component of the hospital's redevelopment. The event also featured a community festival, including family-friendly entertainment.

Oct Indigenous healing room opens

On October 10, an Indigenous healing room opened on Michael Garron Hospital's paediatric unit. Led by the Manager of Aboriginal Culture and The Aboriginal Healing Program at Michael Garron Hospital, community members of the Aboriginal Healing Program gathered this summer to paint the colours of the Medicine Wheel along with the spirit animals on the walls. The team hopes to raise cultural awareness and welcome all children and families to an inclusive healing experience at the hospital.

Nov Canada Order of Excellence in workplace mental health

On November 6, Michael Garron Hospital was honoured with the Canada Order of Excellence—the first hospital in the country to earn this award for its national leadership in workplace mental health. Healthcare workers are 1.5 times more likely to be off work due to illness or disability than people in other sectors. Over 40 per cent of Canadian physicians and nurses reported advanced stages of burnout.

Michael Garron Hospital joins Kids Health Alliance

In November, Michael Garron Hospital officially joined Kids Health Alliance (KHA), a not-for-profit network of partners working to create a child and family-centred approach to high-quality, consistent, co-ordinated paediatric health care.

Dec Michael Garron Hospital awarded Greater Toronto Area's Top 100 Employers

In December, Michael Garron Hospital was awarded as one of the Greater Toronto Area's top employers by the Canada's Top 100 Employers project for the third year in a row. This prestigious award is a benchmark for workplace best practices and recognizes organizations that demonstrate leading-edge initiatives that engage employees and inspire them to be their best.

Feb Opening of nocturnal dialysis program

To help ease the burden for patients who receive dialysis treatment, on February 4, Michael Garron Hospital launched a new nocturnal dialysis program starting with six patients. This treatment happens at night, when a patient is sleeping. Studies have shown that nocturnal dialysis significantly improves patient outcomes and quality of life. The equipment required to provide this life-changing treatment was purchased through the generosity of the Garron family gift.

"When I had a birthday we asked ECHOage to give the present money to Michael Garron Hospital. Why? Because of now. Every day has someone who needs help now, so that they will have a better future, or even a future. They helped my dad and myself and my brother. Every day, someone's dad or mom or brother or sister needs help now and they might not get it if we don't help the hospital."

Kai, age 8

"I've had a business in this neighbourhood since the 1950s—this community has supported my business over the years, and it's home to me. I truly believe that when you give, you get back. I've been giving back to Michael Garron Hospital for over 25 years because it's just the right thing to do."

"I work here so I know this is a special place. But I've also experienced the incredible level of care and compassion first-hand when my children were in the special care nursery as newborns. I also know how vital ongoing donor support is. It allows our hospital to provide the best level of care for people in our community who don't necessarily have the supports or resources available to them that others do. We give back to the hospital because we believe our money can go further here."

FOR WALTER JONES, VOLUNTEERING WAS ALWAYS PART OF HIS DNA

"Even up until just before he passed away late last year, Walter was still volunteering here at the hospital playing the piano for patients and long-term residents," says his wife Dilys. "Giving back to the community was something he felt very passionate about."

Walter had a long history with Michael Garron Hospital, beginning in 1982 when he was appointed to the hospital's Board of Governors. He was also Chair of the Foundation Board from 1992 to 1994, and served on numerous committees for the hospital and the foundation.

Walter was a man with a deep sense of faith, family and community. And after a lifetime of giving back, he chose to honour the hospital and the community with one last donation—a gift in his will.

Dilys Jones has continued to give her time as a hospital volunteer for the past 29 years. She has also committed to leaving a gift in her will, and continues the family legacy as a member of the Joseph H. Harris Society.

"The hospital has always been there for our family, and it's important to see it grow and change," says Dilys. "That's why we've supported it for so many years, and why I also decided to leave a gift in my will. It's an easy thing to do, and it feels good to give back."

“As a community business we’ve been really fortunate, and we have a responsibility to give back, particularly to our local hospital. The medical staff at Michael Garron Hospital dedicates their lives day and night to providing care for the community, so supporting them is the least we can do. Everyone will eventually come into a situation in their life where they’ll understand why a local hospital is so important. It’s a valuable community resource we all need.”

A LEGACY THAT'S LASTING FOR GENERATIONS

There's a reason why donors who make a planned gift are recognized in the Joseph H. Harris Society. Named in honour of our hospital's founder, this program recognizes people who create a legacy of better health for our East Toronto community that will last for generations. So it's especially fitting that Joseph H. Harris's daughter, Helen Wilson, is continuing his tradition of passionate commitment to the hospital and the community it serves through a bequest. Helen—a longtime volunteer and former member of the hospital's board of directors—passed away in April 2018. But through her generosity, she will continue to make an impact on the hospital that was meaningful to her and her family, as well as our entire community.

"As long-time donors, we know how important it is for the hospital to have stable and predictable funding through donor support, to allow for long-term planning and provide the best possible care for our community. We are both proud and hopeful for our community and its service providers—we're thrilled to be giving back to East Toronto."

What you give to the east stays in the east.

Dr. Christopher Smith
Physician

When you make a donation to Michael Garron Hospital, you're really making a gift to your entire community.

We provide most of the healthcare your family needs close to home, at a level of excellence rivalling anywhere else in the city.

There's no better way to make sure your East Toronto neighbourhood can stay healthy, vibrant, and strong than by making sure everyone who lives here has access to the best healthcare possible.

Right now, we're limited by our aging facilities. Your gift to the Heart of the East will help us completely transform our campus, including construction of the new, eight-storey Ken and Marilyn Thomson Patient Care Centre and the dramatic redevelopment of our existing facility—tailored specifically to meet the needs of our community.

On behalf of the nearly 400,000 people in our community, thank you.

We are Michael Garron Hospital.
And we are the heart of the east.
